building upon recent german studies research addressing the industrialization of printing the expansion of publication venues new publication formats and readership market strategies maps a networked literary field in which the production promotion and reception of literature from the enlightenment to world war ii emerges as a collaborative enterprise driven by the interests of actors and institutions these essays demonstrate how a network of authors editors and publishers devised mutually beneficial and at times conflicting strategies for achieving success on the rapidly evolving nineteenth century german literary market in particular the contributors consider how these actors shaped a nineteenth century literary market which included the jewish press highbrow and lowbrow genres and modernist publications they explore the tensions felt as markets expanded and restrictions were imposed which yielded resilient new publication strategies fostered criticism and led to formal innovations the volume thus serves as major contribution to interdisciplinary research in nineteenth century german literary media and cultural studies literary theory flourished in central and eastern europe throughout the twentieth century but its relation to western literary scholarship is complex this book sheds light on the entangled histories of exchange and influence both within the region known as central and eastern europe and between the region and the west the exchange of ideas between scholars in the east and west was facilitated by both personal and institutional relations both official and informal encounters for the longest time however intellectual exchange was thwarted by political tensions that led to large parts of central and eastern europe being isolated from the west a few literary theories nevertheless made it into western scholarly discourses via exiled scholars some of these scholars such as mikhaïl bakhtin become widely known in the west and their thought was transposed onto new western cultural contexts others such as ol'ga freidenberg were barely noticed outside of russian and poland this volume draws attention to the schools circles and concepts that shaped the development of theory in central and eastern europe as well as the histoire croisée the history of translations transformations and migrations that conditioned its relationship with the west one of the most important problems faced by the united states is addressing its broken criminal justice system this collection of essays offers a thorough examination of incarceration as a form of punishment in addition to focusing on the philosophical aspects related to punishment the volume's diverse group of contributors provides additional background in criminology economics law and sociology to help contextualize the philosophical issues the first group of essays addresses whether or not our current institutions connected with punishment and incarceration are justified in a liberal society the next set of chapters explores the negative effects of incarceration as a form of punishment including its impact on children and families the volume then describes how we arrived at our current situation in the united states focusing on questions related to how we view prisons and prisoners policing for profit and the motivations of prosecutors in trying to secure convictions finally rethinking punishment in the era of mass incarceration examines specific policy alternatives that might offer solutions to our current approach to punishment and incarceration

the nineteenth century and after london as a pioneering volume to consider the impact of exile on historical scholarship in the twentieth century in a systematic and global way looking at europe north america south america and asia dynamics of emigration asks about epistemic repercussions on the experience of exile and exiles analyzing both the impact that exile scholars had on their host societies and on the societies they had to leave the volume investigates exiles pathways to integration into new host societies and the many difficulties they face establishing themselves in new surroundings focusing on the age of extremes and the realms of exile from fascist and right wing dictatorships as well as communist regimes the contributions look at the reasons scholars have for going into exile while providing side by side examination of the support organizations and paths for success involved with living in exile in the summers of 1978 and 1980 william w halo directed two national endowment for the humanities summer seminars both of which had the title biblical history in its near eastern setting these seminars conducted at yale university have now resulted in two related collections of essays this second collection scripture in context ii had its origins in the 1980 seminar both seminars investigated in chronological sequence the major phases of ancient near eastern history and focused on the history literary traditions and religion of ancient israel within the context of her cultural environs a major concern was to recognize and explore the implications of the way in which the native biblical and extra biblical literary traditions rendered account of themselves the methodology followed in the seminars and the resulting essays is the contextual approach this approach to the study of biblical history literature and religion is concerned not only to discover illuminating and insightful parallels between biblical and extrabiblical sources but also to note and recognize the implications of significant and important differences jacket
