in recent years ongoing democratization in indonesia has enabled the rise of a form of islam that is more sympathetic to the basic democratic principle of individual freedom as a result many islamic symbols have lost their strictly religious meanings in favor of new pragmatic and political undertones combining approaches from political science and anthropology noorhaidi hasan explores this phenomenon and the extent to which public islam could represent a new future for the nation one that moves beyond the simple opposition of state versus religion

one of the great transformations presently sweeping the muslim world involves not just political and economic change but the reshaping of young muslims styles of romance courtship and marriage nancy j smith hefner takes up the personal lives and sexual attitudes of educated muslim javanese youth in the city of yogyakarta to explore the dramatic social and ethical changes taking place in indonesian society drawing on more than 250 interviews over a fifteen year period her vivid well crafted ethnography is full of insights into the real life struggles of young muslims and framed by a deep understanding of indonesia s wider debates on gender and youth culture the changes among muslim youth reflect an ongoing if at times unsteady attempt to balance varied ideals ethical concerns and aspirations on the one hand growing numbers of young people show a deep and pervasive desire for a more active role in their islamic faith on the other even as they seek a more self conscious and scripture based profession of faith many educated youth aspire to personal relationships similar to those seen among youth elsewhere a greater measure of informality openness and intimacy than was typical for their parents and grandparents generations young women in particular seek freedom for self expression employment and social fulfillment outside of the home smith hefner pays particular attention to their shifting roles and perspectives because it is young women who have been most dramatically affected by the upheavals transforming this muslim majority country although deeply personal the changing aspirations of young muslims have immense implications for social and public life throughout indonesia the fruit of a longitudinal study begun shortly after the fall of the authoritarian new order government and the return to democracy in 1998 1999 the book reflects smith hefner s nearly forty years of anthropological engagement with the island of java and her continuing exploration into what it means to be both modern and muslim the culture of the new muslim youth the author shows through all its nuances and variations reflects the inexorable abandonment of traditions and practices deemed incompatible with authentic islam and an ongoing and profound islamization of intimacies less than a year after the end of authoritarian rule in 1998 huge images of jesus christ and other christian scenes proliferated on walls and billboards around a provincial town in eastern indonesia where conflict had arisen between muslims and christians a manifestation of the extreme perception that emerged amid uncertainty and the challenge to seeing brought on by urban warfare the street paintings erected by protestant motorbike taxi drivers signaled a radical departure from the aniconic tradition of the old colonial church a desire to be seen and recognized by political authorities from jakarta to the un and european union an aim to reinstate the christian look of a city in the face of the country s widespread islamicization and an opening to a more intimate relationship to the divine through the bringing into vision of the christian god stridently assertive these affectively charged mediations of religion masculinity across the muslim world religion plays an increasingly prominent role in both the private and public lives of over a billion people observers of these changes struggle to understand the consequences of an islamic resurgence in a democratizing world will democratic political participation by an increasingly religious population lead to victories by islamists at the ballot box will more conspicuously pious muslims participate in politics and markets in a fundamentally different way than they had previously will a renewed attention to islam lead muslim democracies to reevaluate their place in the global community of states turning away from alignments with the west or the global south and towards an islamic civilizational identity the answers to all of these questions depend at least in part on what ordinary muslims think and do in order to provide these answers the authors of this book look to indonesia the world s largest muslim country and one of the world s only consolidated muslim democracies they draw on original public opinion data to explore how religiosity and religious belief translate into political and economic behavior at the individual level across various issue areas support for democracy or islamic law partisan politics islamic finance views about foreign engagement they find no evidence that the religious orientations of indonesian muslims have any systematic relationships with their political preferences or economic behavior the broad conclusion is that scholars of islam in indonesia and elsewhere must understand religious life and individual piety as part of a larger and more complex set of social transformations these transformations include modernization economic development and globalization each of which has occurred in parallel with islamic revivalism throughout the world against the common assumption that piety would naturally inhibit any tendencies towards modernity democracy or cosmopolitanism piety and public opinion reveals the complex and subtle links between religion and political beliefs in a critically important muslim democracy zakat one of islam s five pillars is the practice of giving a fixed proportion of one s financial assets to those in need thereby purifying both one s soul and one s remaining wealth in indonesia since the coming of islam zakat has been a means of worship and its collection has been voluntary and decentralized arskal salim s study argues that in the post new order regime 1966 1998 zakat practice changed structurally and institutionally through the enactment of a law on zakat management followed by the establishment of a national zakat agency a cultural shift is now in progress with two possible outcomes either zakat collection will become compulsory and centralized or it will become such an intricate part of taxation law that it loses its spiritual relevance the years following the fall of suharto have been full of promises of liberation but also apprehension for the future the period brought an unprecedented rise in the public profile of islamic politics new and public debates on past human rights violations protracted and irrevocable divisions within top political elite the rise of asian popular culture and a digital communication revolution passionately welcomed by young indonesians along with youths all around the world identity and pleasure the politics of indonesian screen culture critically examines what media and screen culture reveal about the ways urban based indonesians attempted to redefine their identity in the first decade of this century through a richly nuanced analysis of their expressions and representations across screen culture cinema television and social media it analyses the waves of energy and optimism and the disillusionment disorientation and despair that arose in the power vacuum after the dramatic collapse of the militaristic new order government the overall narrative provides much reason for optimism but it also suggests that the deep reservoir of creativity that gave rise to indonesia s local hybrid modernities has been targeted by competing grounds of modernists who favour a narrow definition of what it means to be indonesian a co publication with the center for southeast asian studies kyoto university
